

Classic bedrock drops are abound in Ticino

Ticino: Steep Creekin' Adventure

Ticino – or Tessin – is a granite gem nestled in southern Switzerland

Even the mention of runs like the Rovana, the Vercasca or the Ribo is enough to whet the appetite of even the most well travelled river boaters. An Italian-speaking region, its rivers have been steep creeking destinations for years, though English language information's been hard to come by.

Our expert river guides know the region inside out. They've been visiting it for years, and know put-ons, take-outs and everything in between. We've got high water options, low water options and quality creeking to match anywhere else in the world.

The runs tend to carry a bit more water than the Val Sesia classics, without the big volume feel of Norway. Our adventures give you the independence to handle things like camping and cooking, while we handle the logistics and the river guiding.
