Grand Canyon Big Water Class III/IV September 2008

The Grand Canyon is a true world class multi-day trip

An ambition of every whitewater kayaker, the sheer geographical scale means that every corner you come to, every morning you wake up you'll stand in awe

Summary

The Grand Canyon's not just a float trip: it's a proper whitewater wilderness, lasting for over 200 miles. With grade III-IV rapids keeping you on your toes and the legendary lava falls spicing up your trip, there's plenty of whitewater interest

We've teamed up with one of the local outfitters so we can offer full raft support and keep your boat light and responsive. Of course, it also means we can skip the fifteen year waiting list for a permit! Of course, this kind of experience doesn't come cheap but there's nowhere else in the world that offers you ten days of multi-day paddling in such a stunning location.

Programme

Day 1 Arrive in Las Vegas and head to a local hotel. That evening we'll meet with the outfitter we're using and make some plans for the trip

Day 2 Leave in the morning for the launching point at Lee's Ferry

Day 3-13 Paddle the Grand!

Day 15 Arrive at the Diamond Creek take-out mid-morning and transfer back to Las Vegas by late afternoon

Day 16 Depart for the airport

NOTE: Of course, this schedule is only a guideline but we're unlikely to have to deviate from it

Details

COSTS: £2999/4300€/5250US NB Guide Price TBC in Winter 07

The price includes teaching and instruction, raft support with camping equipment, all meals, local ground transport from Las Vegas to the Canyon and the return trip, hotel accommodation in Las Vegas and river shuttles

It doesn't cover your flights to Las Vegas, personal and health insurance, boat and equipment hire or alcohol

Flights

We recommend that you fly with British Airways, where we'll meet you at the airport.

Accommodation & Catering

Most of the trip will be spent camping in the canyon. We'll spend one night at either end of the trip in a hotel in Las Vegas. Don't worry even though we're living on the river, we'll eat as well as on any of our other courses!

Make sure you bring

Whitewater boat (get in touch if you want to find out about hiring one) A good shortie paddle top, paddle, whitewater PFD and helmet Solid footwear for hiking around in the canyon Suitable gear for taking on the river in a steep and arid country - you should bring light cotton clothing, approach shoes and a sun hat
